Complimentary Notice For Our Fellow Townsman

The Pittsburgh Dispatch's roster of prominent men in the Pittsburgh district, today contained a picture and sketch of E. C. Sattley, manager of the Page Woven Wire Fence company of Monessen. Mr. Sattley for a number of years has been an active member of the Pittsburgh Traffic club and is known as one of the most successful steel men of the country. During the industrial slump of 1914-15 the industry of which he is head never lost a turn and none of the employes suffered a reduction in wages. Mr. Sattley in addition to being actively engaged in the steel business has been one of Monessen's greatest individual promoters. He has been an active member of the Board of Trade and has served on many of the committees in addition to being its president one year., He is a member of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian church and is an active worker in every way for the best interest of the town.

This paper and the town is proud of such citizens as Mr. Sattley and we reproduce the fine compliment the Pittsburgh paper gave him:

"Born of sturdy Vermont parents, amidst the rock-ribbed hills of New England, Mr. Sattley's early life was spent in the same environment and there his more than ordinarily liberal education was secured. In the early 80's however, in the first flush of manhood, he followed his star of destiny westward, tarrying for a while in Chicago, where he engaged in railroad work and then journeyed on to Los Angeles, where he had been tendered and accepted a position in connection with the management of the Mt. Lowe railway and its hotels. About 15 years ago, however, Mr. Sattley returned to the East and entered the employ of the Page Woven Wire Fence company at its Monessen plant, in which service he has been engaged since, having attained to the position of general manager of the company which, besides its big plant referred to, operates one at Adrian, Mich.

"As a man of affairs Mr. Sattley may be written successful. Suave and courteous of manner, he secures the confidence and regard of those with whom he is brought into association directly, while the keenness of his judgment in business matters is axiomatic among his acquaintances and his popularity is widespread. With his family Mr. Sattley resides in a handsome home at Monessen, although much of his time is spent necessarily in Pittsburgh, where the general offices of the Page company are located.

"Mr. Sattley is also a leading and influential member of the Traffic club of Pittsburgh, of which he was president during a recent term. He holds membership also in the Athletic, Union and Railway clubs, the Chamber of Commerce and the Association of Credit Men."

Banker Buys Dog For Country Home

J. Howard Kelley has purchased a bull dog. Not as a matter of fancy, but as a matter of protection. The canine is of the vicious variety with the punch and the pep. Sometime ago an attempt was made to enter his country home back of Belle Vernon and Howard is of the opinion the fellows want money, and while he barely keeps enough about the house to square up with the milk man, he thinks everybody doesn't know that. Now sir, the next prowler who attempts to crawl over the fence will be greeted with the snarls of a vicious bull dog. That's the stuff, Howard, it's cheaper to howl and bark and bite than it is to shoot. Give us peace at any price.

Birthday Party

Mr. and Mrs. H. Eisenberg of Rostraver street, entertained about thirty friends of their daughter Ruth in honor of her third birthday anniversary yesterday afternoon. The home was beautifully decorated in green and white. Games were played by the young folks until five o'clock when the hostess served the little guests with a delicious lunch. The following were present: Milton Geiss, Stanley Nayhouse, Irwin Shapiro, Arthur and Irwin Eisenberg, Benny Weiss, Leonard Cherkin, Eddie Rubenstein, Paul Feldman, Raymond and Bernard Ginsberg, Edith and Stanley Nayhouse, Sarah Cherkin, Sylvia Katz, Creline Kraus, Grace Lipman, Jennie Cherkin, Rose Safier, Anna Safier, Mildred Weiss, Stella Eisenberg, Gertrude Eisenberg.

Open To All

The gymnasium of the new Monessen High school has been thrown open for the public, and Thursday evening of each week the young men of the town are given the privilege of using this part of the building for athletic exercises. An instructor will be provided each evening and those who wish to make use of the gymnasium may have their choice of taking dumb bell exercises, drills, basket ball or any other exercise.

Each person joining the gymnasium class will be requested to pay a nominal fee of $1.00 for the entire season and this will entitle them to all the privileges of both the gymnasium and shower baths. Basket ball enthusiasts will readily take advantage of this offer as it will not only give them a good place to practice, but will afford them an excellent place for games with visiting teams.

If arrangements are made for games with other teams, on Thursday evenings, there will be no extra charge for the use of the gymnasium, and the only expense the management of the team need meet, will be that of traveling expenses for the visiting players. If games are scheduled on other evenings of the week, arrangements must be made beforehand with the instructor, so that it will not conflict with other engagements, and it is probable that a small fee will be charged for the use of the gymnasium.

One night will be set aside for the girls' class and Tuesday evening the Boy Scouts have secured the room. Friday night will probably be kept open for the High school basket ball games. Any person wishing to enroll and enjoy the advantages of the gymnasium should communicate with Superintendent Gress at once or report at the gymnasium next Thursday evening.

William Bumbaugh Predicts Mild Winter

William S. Bumbaugh, president of the Monessen Foundry and Machine company, is the only man in town who has braved the elements. Mr. Bumbaugh predicts an open winter. He says every sign points that way and to prove that he believes it he has not yet discarded his straw hat.

He was seen riding through the streets yesterday in Ed. Anderson's automobile with his old straw on, apparently comfortable and unconcerned about what other people were wearing. He expects to be able to wear it up until about Christmas. When asked just what sign he had the most faith in, Mr. Bumbaugh replied, "Well if you notice there is very little hair on the end of the ears of corn, and the rooster's tail droops considerable which is evidence of a warm, wet fall."

Pungent Debate On Timely And Interesting Subject

Great interest is being centered in tonight's meeting of the Board of Trade.

The subject that will come up for discussion seems to be a very popular one at this time and many are inquiring who the speakers are to be. It is not definitely known who will read the papers, but the subject of "Buying at Home" will be presented from both sides, and a general discussion will be engaged in by members of the board and those present.

The collection of dues for 1915 is being pushed and statements were sent out asking everybody to remit by tonight Some few checks are coming in while a great many are on the tardy list. Some owe for two years and one or two of these have asked to be dropped, but the committee urges such members to square up before having their names dropped.

Good talent is being arranged for as speakers for the annual banquet. It is likely that J. Leonard Levy of Pittsburgh, will be one of the speakers, and an attempt is being made to secure United States Senator Boies Penrose. Senator Penrose has promised to be here some time to take part in a public function, but each time he has been called, other engagements prevented his coming. But this year the date of the banquet will likely be arranged to suit his convenience.

With the coming in of a new administration the first of the year, it is likely some reforms will be worked out in the organization and it may become a chartered institution with permanent headquarters. So far the meetings have been held in the council chamber, but it is hoped by another year to provide permanent meeting quarters. A big attendance is expected tonight and some interesting discussions will be engaged in.

Newspaper Reforms

No man has a keener responsibility in this great world with its whirlpool of professions than the newspaper editor. No man in the community contributes more toward its upbuilding than does he, and no man is censured more. There are people who hold the editor personally responsible for every statement in the paper regardless of what it is or who says it. Such people make the burden of the editor greater, but what cares he so long as the paper succeeds.

Mrs. Ida B. Cole, field secretary of the Chautauqua institution, in a recent address said in part: "We are realizing today that the newspaper is one of the tremendously important things in our life Among the most common things said about them is that the American newspaper is under the control of monopolies and subservient to advertisers. This is true to a certain extent, yet I claim that the newspapers are no more under the control of monopolies than our other enterprises, not excepting churches and colleges.

"Fifty years ago the reading public was smaller, but the standard was higher. Today with a larger reading public than any other country in the world, our news standard is far below that of fifty years go. This reading public makes the faults of the newspapers what they are. The newspaper tries to give the people the kind of news they want. You cannot have a yellow paper if there are not yellow readers.

"The money of every newspaper is made on advertising; the value of the advertising depends upon the size of the circulation, and that depends upon the kind of news the paper prints. When you have an endowed newspaper you can give the people the kind of news they ought to have, but to do that today under our present system would mean bankruptcy. There may come a time when we shall have endowed newspapers. The nearest we come to it today is the Christian Science Monitor.

"If you and I did not want scandal and crime we would not get it It has been said that there is not a bad play on the American stage that could exist six months without the support of the women and that is the case with the newspapers. We want thrills in our newspapers and just as long as the American people want to know what a condemned criminal eats for his breakfast on his last day on earth, just so long will they get it.

"Headines are a matter of advertising. The paper with the big headlines goes first on the news-stands. Hundreds of people, further, give their children the comic supplement to look at before they can read. Suggestion is a powerful force and children brought up on such stuff as appears in the comic supplements cannot have high ideals. Still we have it because the people want it.

"Today there is a desire on the part of the newspaper editors for better and cleaner newspapers, but they must meet the demands of the people. We must have higher standards of taste, and there must be a greater demand on the part of the public for cleaner news before such a reform can come about."

Ready For Game

Night practice is being held by the Charlerci High school football team in preparation for the gruelling battle for the valley High school title which will be played between Monessen and Charleroi, Saturday. One of the regular men will be out of the struggle. This will be Jennings Ritchey, whose regular position at tackle will be filled by another.

There is a rule among the schools which governs High school games in this state to the effect that a High school player is not eligible for High school games if he plays with another team. This it is reported is what Ritchey did, playing last Saturday with a Charleroi independent team. Monessen raised a protest that had to be heard. Ritchey's loss will be keenly felt in this, the all-important game of the season, but with good substitutes, Coach Gdaniec hopes to fill the place.—Charleroi Mail.

WHAT $10 DID FOR THIS WOMAN

The Price She Paid for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Which Brought Good Health.

Danville, Va.—"I have only spent ten dollars on your medicine and I feel so much better than I did when the doctor was treating me. I don't suffer any bearing down pains at all now and I sleep well. I cannot say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as they have done so much for me. I am enjoying good health now and owe it all to your remedies. I take pleasure in telling my friends and neighbors about them."—Mrs. MATTIE HALEY, 501 Colquhone Street, Danville, Va.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

IMPORTANT AGENCY OF THE NATIONAL TIRE FOR TOWN

A deal has been put through with the International Automobile League of Buffalo, New York, by one of the progressive young business men, Mr. George Phillips, for the sale of the National Tire in Monessen, so well and favorably known throughout the country.

The National Tire received its introduction to the motoring public, through the members of the International Automobile League, an organization of some 70,000 members, scattered throughout the United States and abroad. This organization today with its steadily increasing membership and wonderful purchasing power has come to be the most important organization of its kind in the world, and it is natural that the tryout of the National Tire under all conditions and in all sections of the country by its members has proven a severe test and one which only tires of the highest grade could withstand.

Mr. Phillips is to be congratulated upon the securing of this agency as the National is the accomplishment of the Ideal, from every viewpoint in tire building, ranking as it does with the best tires manufactured, and carrying the standard guarantee of 3,500 miles.

Mr. Phillips proposes to carry a complete stock of all sizes, both in the smooth and non-skid, at Monessen, and will be in a position to take care of every want of motorists at all times. 35-2t

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1915, By Wright A. Patterson)
Novelized From the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Much of these operations was easily visible from the yacht's deck. Apparently there were some commands from the man who stood at the bow binoculars in hand Overboard went a pair of boats manned by stout oars men who swept them quickly toward the shore.

The man with the binoculars saw two figures on the beach, easily distinguishable from the savage ones around them One was a man, and the other a boy, at first he thought. "White," he muttered to himself. "Refugees—castaways of some sort on this coast How did they get here, I wonder? But by Jove! my fellows are giving the natives all they want, I'm thinking"

Such indeed, was the case The sailor men plunged through the surf as their keels touched bottom and came on at a run, rifles in hand and firing as they came, with the effect that half a dozen of the savages fell

"Send This!" Exclaimed Count Frederick. "If You Cut in on Anything Else I'll Kill You!"

The others scattered like sheep and left the captives standing there dazed, yet happy at their deliverance. The petty officer in charge of the landing came up to Count Frederick and saluted. He seemed to recognize in him, tattered as he was, a man of former authority. "How do you do, your honor?" said he "We came just in time."

"Yes, my men, and we thank you. Who are you?"

"Private Yacht Princess, Liverpool registry, owned by Arthur Wyndham He's on board, sir—shall we take you off?"

"Certainly, as quickly as possible But have you any water in the boat? We have had none for more than two days"

The sailor turned toward the speaker's companion whose garb was scarce that of a lady, but whose form and features surely seemed such.

"Do you mean to say that this young lady?—" he began.

"Yes, she has not had a bite to eat nor a drop of water in two days."

"Come quick, sir, then. We've a water breaker in our longboat. Have you anything to fetch along?"

Count Frederick laughed at this and even Kitty smiled.

"You see us as we are," said Count Frederick. "We were castaways here shipwrecked from the steamer Adler."

Oh, yes, we heard of that. I see, I see—it is most fortunate we came this way"

"How far must that have been from shore where she went down?"

"Perhaps a hundred and seventy-five miles from her port of departure You're half that distance, here, from where she went down, as near as we can tell No other survivors have been picked up so far as we heard How have you got on here?"

Count Frederick shrugged his shoulders "They'd have burned us both if you had not come If you had not seen us we'd have starved.

"Handsome luck, sir! But who are you, if I may ask?"

"You may take us aboard," said Count Frederick with dignity "You said your owner's name was—"

"Wyndham, sir, Mr. Arthur Wyndham of Hants"

He touched his hat now and led the way to the boatside where ready hands offered water to the two famished castaways.

On board the Princess Mr. Arthur Wyndham, owner of the boat and her cargo, solid or spirituous—he had been perhaps more devoted to the latter portion these last few days—still stood with his glasses at his eyes. "By Jove!" said he, "that boy is a girl, and the girl is a young woman, bless my eyes!"

Not displeased at this, he greeted the two newcomers at the ship's ladder when the boat brought them alongside

"Well done, Parsons," said he to his boat steerer "I saw you bag a half dozen of those beggars And who are these new friends of ours? I am delighted if we have saved you from a bit of bad luck yonder. Neither of you hurt, I trust?"

He talked to Count Frederick, but he looked at Kitty Gray.

"Fortunately not," replied Count Frederick. "I understand we are meeting Mr. Arthur Wyndham"

"Quite right sir. You are refugees here?"

"No, sir, we are shipwrecked passengers of the Adler, lost at sea."

"Indeed, a shocking accident—no survivors reported Most fortunate I sailed this way."

"This is Miss Kitty Gray," said Count Frederick, casting a keen eye upon his host and taking some reckoning of his evident late conviviality. "She is American As for me, I am a citizen of the kingdom of Gretzhoffen."

Mr. Arthur Wyndham gathered no great sense of the speaker's importance. His eyes were fixed upon Kitty Gray rather too covetously. "So you got away when she struck?" he went on carelessly.

"She did not strike," corrected Count Frederick, "she was blown up by an accident."

"Too bad, too bad—well, well. But I say, perhaps the young lady would like to change? There may be some sort of woman's togs in the cabin below. My sister comes aboard once in a while, you know!" And he essayed a portentous wink aside at Count Frederick.

"That will be agreeable, I am sure," replied Count Frederick quietly, "and if you could send down to the young lady's cabin a bit to eat and a carafe of water, I am sure it will be appreciated. She has had neither food nor drink for more than two days, sir"

"Nor has he—my friend," said Kitty Gray, smiling faintly.

"God bless my soul!" said Mr. Wyndham "I never thought of that Send you down some wine—send you down a brace of stout if you like, I can recommend it—my father makes it, don't you see."

Count Frederick, liking his new surroundings only by comparison with those he recently had left, signed to Kitty Gray and presently the two, conducted by boat stewards, departed for the cabins to which they were assigned by the owner of the boat. The latter, whether from his late imbibings or through the effect of the beautiful young girl's presence, evidently was what the French call tete montee.

HAVE COLOR IN YOUR CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

Feats of Archery.

In the days when the buffalo was found in vast herds on the western plains there were Indians who while riding at a gallop could send an arrow through a buffalo's body Remarkable as this archery was, it did not equal that reached by the archers of ancient times

It is of record that the Macrimes of Gartlock, Scotland were such skilled archers that they could hit a man at the distance of 500 yards In 1794 the Turkish ambassador at London shot an arrow in a field near that capital 415 yards against the wind The secretary of the ambassador, on hearing the expressions of surprise from the English gentlemen present, said the sultan had shot 500 yards This was the greatest performance of modern days, but a pillar standing on a plain near Constantinople recorded shots ranging up to 800 yards Sir Robert Ainslie, British ambassador to the sublime porte, records that in 1798 he was present when the sultan shot an arrow 972 yards

The colored population in a little Alabama town was having a race meet at the local fair grounds An aged negro whose shoes were slashed to give his gnarly toe joints air sat in a seat on the grand stand Immediately in front of him stood a large, excited damsel who had a whole dollar wagered on the favorite in the free for all trot.

As the horses turned into the home stretch the woman jumped up in the air coming down squarely with all her weight on the infirm extremities of the old man A groan escaped him, and she turned and begged his pardon

"Uncle Zach, I's awfully sorry!" she said

"Dat's all right, honey," answered the old man gallantly "I only hopes mah feet ain't too corrugated fo' yoah pleasure"—Saturday Evening Post.

Regeneration.

Starfish will grow new arms, lobsters new claws and lizards new tails. A new lizard will not indeed spring from a new tail or a new lobster from a discarded claw, but a new starfish will grow from a detached arm. In the vegetable kingdom, as a writer in Knowledge remarks, this phenomenon is still more common and has been put by man to practical use. Although identical in principle, the growing of a plant from a cutting may not seem so astonishing as the growing of a new starfish but growing not one but many plants from a leaf seems almost as extraordinary. Among the many plants that can thus be propagated is the begonia and every housewife knows a geranium plant can be grown from a leaf stalk.

The Pawned Watch

By EUNICE BLAKE

One morning a man entered a pawnshop in the town of Hurdsville and offered a good watch as security for a loan The broker examined the watch, then looked up at the man who had brought it in. The latter, though fairly well dressed, had a troubled look in his eye

"Whose initials are these?' asked the broker, referring to some letters engraved on the case

"Oh, if you're going to hunt up my ancestors it'll take too much time," replied the man, and he reached for the watch The broker surrendered it, and the man departed

Now, it happened that the broker was in touch with the police and was giving them information as to suspected stolen goods offered at his shop He telephoned the incident, describing the man, and a detective was put on his track

Let us go back three years

Hiram Jenks, a bachelor with no relatives, one day called his clerk, Thomas Wentworth, into his private office and said.

'Tom, I have something important to say to you When I first went into business I associated with me a man named Perkins He speculated with funds belonging to the firm and sank money for me as well as himself After a quarrel I put him out of the firm, and when we parted, giving me the ugliest look I ever received from a man, he said that he would get even with me some day Since that day I have at times been fearful that he would keep his word I suppose it is weak and foolish in me to brood over it, but I can't help it At any rate, I wish to make provision in case anything happens You will find a will in the safe leaving what little I have to you, and you can run this business just as I am running it now"

Jenks and Wentworth lived in rooms over the store One morning the latter arose to find his employer murdered in his bed Whatever valuables were in the room had been taken, leaving the impression that the murder had been committed for plunder No clew to the murderer could be found, and when Wentworth presented a will in his favor for probate a suspicion was aroused that he had murdered the testator, who was still a young and healthy man, that he might enjoy the bequest in reality instead of in prospect. Up to this time no evidence whatever pointed to Wentworth, but now the police, who had been blamed for not hunting up the murderer, began to pick up threads and in time concocted a scheme to fix the murder upon him It is astonishing how by constant digging and putting this and that together an apparently good case may be made against any accused person Although this evidence against Wentworth rested on the flimsiest foundation it was enough to set tongues wagging, and when the structure seemed to the state attorney to be complete the young man was arrested

Wentworth was taken all aback at the accusation. He was incapable of doing anything to work up a case in his favor but he had a sweetheart who after the first shock being satisfied of his innocence went to work diligently for evidence to prove his innocence Tom told her what his employer had said to him when at the time he informed him that he had made him his heir and his fears that the man who had asserted he would get even with him some day would make his words good She began first to learn something about Perkins from the time he and his partner had separated. She finally located him one year after his threat and by dint of following up different leads kept on his track to a short time after the murder

When the case came to trial the prosecution brought forth the evidence that had been adduced by the energetic police—he was relying on the political influences of the force in a coming election—bringing forth testimony of neighbors to prove that no one entered or came out of the store between 10 p m. and 7 a m., that a voice believed to be Jenks had been heard to cry, "You ungrateful villain ' and that Wentworth had been seen a few days before the murder to steal into the house with a bludgeon

The defense took no trouble to refute any of these charges. The sweetheart of the accused Miss Marian Thorndyke, was the only important witness on the other side and her testimony was elicited, as usual, by questions of counsel He led her to state how she had hunted for Perkins, how she had finally got on his track and how she had located him not a week before the trial Then he produced a gold watch bearing the initials "H T J " and he proved by those who had seen it in Jenks' possession that it had belonged to him

This evidence having been introduced, counsel proceeded to show how Miss Thorndyke had located Perkins and was watching him when he tried to pawn the watch The notification to the police by the pawnbroker had been communicated to her, and Perkins had been arrested At this point the attorney rested his case and the jury acquitted the prisoner without leaving their seats

At the trial of Perkins for the murder of Jenks Wentworth, being now free, was a consistent witness and told the story Jenks had told him of the quarrel between the partners and Perkins' threat This, taken with his trying to pawn the watch, was sufficient evidence to convict him.

COMFORTING WORDS

Many a Monessen Household Will Find Them So

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders, is enough to make any sufferer grateful The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Monessen readers.

Mrs Ida Coleman, 311 Sixth St., Monessen says: "I was troubled by a constant backache and in the morning especially when I stooped to put on my shoes, I found it hard to straighten Sharp pains took my breath away I felt tired all the time and had dizzy spells and hot flashes My head ached. I doctored for a long time but didn't get much good and finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I got at Kirk's drug store. They gave me great relief and after I had taken the second box. the trouble disappeared. I haven't had any cause for compiaint since. Others of the family are now using Doan's Kidney Pills and consider them the best kidney medicine on the market."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs Coleman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Cult of the Cow.

In "Sval" a medley of the east, Sir George Birdwood has a note on the minute ritual instinctive in the race of Brahmanic Hindus, observed in regard to cattle especially cows.

'You must not step over a rope to which a calf is tied and must always approach and pass a cow on your right hand and keep your right arm covered the whole time you are in the cow shippen You must never ride a cow nor interrupt her while suckling her calf nor in any way annoy her Shortly after the railway between Poona and Bombay was opened a cow having to be sent by a Hindu in the former city to another in the latter, its entrainment for the journey was telegraphed by the sender to the receiver in the equivalent of these terms: 'Her holiness just booked by the —— a. m train to Erecula (a suburb of Bombay) Please be at the station at —— p. m. to receive her holiness "

A WORRIER

Thanksgiving Day Brought Her a Respite

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

When the great war broke out in Europe my little girl, Fredrica, was in Munich studying art. I at once became uneasy about her, and when I heard of the great number of Americans detained in Europe I lost my head entirely. I wanted John to go abroad at once and bring our daughter home.

He endeavored to quiet me, reminding me that Fredrica was not the child she had been; that it would be difficult for him to get across, still more difficult to find her and much more difficult still to get back to America. He was worried himself, though he did not admit it to me, well knowing that we had been able only to keep our child supplied with sufficient funds to pay her way from month to month without providing anything ahead, and she had no means to bring her home.

Week after week passed, and we heard nothing from our chick. Worrying told on me bodily, and I was reduced to skin and bone. At last I told John that if he did not do something to end my suspense he would lose me as well as Fredrica. He went out at once to learn if he could get across the ocean, and, finding that a ship would sail next day, he took passage on her and, procuring by loan what money he would need, bade me goodby. "I have no doubt," he said, "that Fred will be here with you before I return. Nevertheless there is no help for it; I must go after her."

As soon as he had gone I was half sorry I had let him go. Now I had the two of them to worry about instead of one. Besides, by this time ships began to come in loaded with returning Americans, and the stories of their discomforts were harrowing. John went over in an English ship, and I worried lest he should be captured by one of the German war vessels at that time roving the sea.

When, true enough, I took up a newspaper and saw that this had really happened I was in despair. It was all I could bear to think of my only child detained without means in Germany, and now I had the additional worriment of her father carried about on the ocean with no prospect of being landed anywhere, for he might be captured by a German cruiser, and they were running the gantlet of the enemy's cruisers and often did not put into port for months at a time.

John started abroad about the 1st of September. Of course he could not communicate with me unless put ashore, and even then he might be landed on the other side of the world, in which case, the mails being interrupted, it might take a letter months to reach me. At that time I had only our daughter to worry about, and now the causes of worriment were tripled. I worried about Fredrica, I worried about John, and I worried because I knew that John would worry about me. I believed that if I could have thought of anything else to worry about I would have included it. The only thing else there was to worry about was myself, but that didn't trouble me a bit. And yet there was apparently more cause to worry about myself than either of the others, for I had lost twenty pounds and was gradually sinking into the grave.

November came and not a word from either of my absent ones. I had intimate friends, of course, who tried in every way to bolster me up. My cousin, Ellen Thompson, asked me about a week before Thanksgiving to promise that I would spend the day with her and her large family. She said that with so many of them I would forget my troubles. I told her that I would be more miserable in the midst of a happy family than alone; I would spend Thanksgiving in my own home, enduring my loneliness as best I could.

The day before Thanksgiving I went around to Ellen Thompson's to ask if she had seen in any of the papers a notice of the landing of the persons that the German cruiser had captured.

"Why, Ellen, what in the world are you going to do with two turkeys?" I exclaimed, noticing a pair of gobblers just delivered from the market.

"Oh, we've so many mouths to fill," she said, "that one turkey won't do."

It seemed to me that she had ordered provisions enough to last her a fortnight. But I said no more about it, and since Ellen said that she hadn't seen anything to comfort me in the papers I went home. I carried more worry with me, for before I left Ellen she put her arms about me and smiled at me. I reckoned that she was concealing some bad news from me.

The next morning, Thanksgiving day, I had scarcely finished dressing when, hearing a vehicle stop before the house, I looked out through the window, and who should I see but John alighting from a cab! And the next thing I saw was John handing out Fredrica. I ran downstairs at the risk of my neck, and, meeting them at the front door, together they kept me from falling on the floor in a faint.

Soon after their arrival Ellen brought us an extra Thanksgiving dinner she had provided for us, for John had sent her a message from quarantine to let her know that he and Fredrica were coming. We had a glorious Thanksgiving, John and Fredrica narrating their adventures. John had been put ashore from a cruiser that had captured him in an out of the way place and had gone to Munich, where he found Fredrica quietly pursuing her studies, waiting her next remittance.

I tell John that I will never worry again. He adds, "Till the next time."

Great Help To Children

Harrisburg, Pa., November 17—Governor Brumbaugh today issued the following statement regarding the establishment of continuation schools throughout Pennsylvania under the Child Labor Act which becomes effective January 1.

"Reports made to me by the State Departments of Public Instruction and Labor and Industry, which are cooperating to obtain the establishment of continuation schools, indicate that at least three-quarters of the children now working in this state will be provided with continuation school facilities next January when the new Child Labor Act goes into effect.

"In every industrial community in this state, active steps are being taken to establish continuation classes. Every boy or girl under sixteen years of age, employed after January 1st, next, must attend one of these classes at least eight hours a week.

"I am especially pleased with the attitude which employers of children generally have assumed. I am informed that wherever the school men have gone to places of business personally and talked with employers, explaining to them the benefits which would accrue both of them and to their young employes under this Child Labor Law, that they have expressed a willingness to meet all its provisions. In fact some firms which had expressed themselves as opposed to the new law, have agreed to furnish space in their establishments for conducting continuation classes, and a few have even agreed to pay the teachers.

"I am particularly pleased with the manner in which the situation was handled in Philadelphia. Four distinct steps have been taken by the Board of Education in that city.

"In the first place, an associate superintendent of schools was elected, whose duty it is to arrange for the establishment of continuation schools.

"Next, the Bureau of Compulsory Education was re-organized. Ten branch offices have been established throughout the city for the issuance of employment certificates, the physical examination of children and as headquarters for the Compulsory Attendance officers. In addition to this these branch offices will also do work along the line of vocational guidance by endeavoring to find places for children desiring to work, and of finding employes for firms desiring to hire children under sixteen.

"Third, the Board has under consideration the salary schedule for teachers in the continuation classes. It is the intention to pay teachers in these classes from one to two hundred dollars more a year than will be paid to the regular grade teachers.

"Fourth, the Board has adopted a general policy of endeavoring to open as rapidly as possible, after January 1st, continuation classes for all those receiving employment certificates and entering upon employment at that time, and all the additional classes needed in the regions where the number of children now employed is greatest. In addition, as rapidly as possible, the schools already established in business and industrial plants will be taken over by the Board.

"Complete arrangements for the establishment of continuation classes are also being made in Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Allentown, Johnstown, Altoona, Lebanon, Easton, Beaver Falls, Mauch Chunk, Harrisburg, Williamsport, York and many smaller communities.

"The agents of the Departments of Public Instruction and Labor and Industry will visit before January 1st, every community in which it is necessary to establish continuation classes, and I am sure the new year will see ready and full compliance with all the provisions of the new law.

"I am indeed grateful for the splendid spirit of co-operation which has been shown both by school men and employers of children in their efforts to raise the standard of citizenship in our glorious commonwealth."

You dare not miss such a week of offerings at the Olympic.

GIVE PRISONER THIRD DEGREE

The horrors of the Spanish Inquisition were recalled and the 20th century ideals of love, truth and justice knocked back into the dark ages yesterday when C ounty Detective Frank Mitchell admitted, under a scorching cross examination by Attorney Howard W. Hughes, counsel for the defendant, that he and H. G. Mock, a member of the state police, had subjected Fred Kolbos, now on trial for the killing of M. Cohen at Marianna, to the most outlandish and fiendish third degree methods in the history of Washington county crime in the effort to extort a confession from the accused man.

With perfect calmness, Mitchell told the appalling story of how he and Mock, believeing Kilbos to be the guilty man in the case of the Marianna murder, had taken the suspect to a barn, placed a leather harness around his neck, attached a rope and then put their victim through much of the agony of a slow death without the merciful end to the misery which death should bring.

The idea, the detective made plain, was not to hurt the man, and not to raise him from the floor, but only to give him a little "stretching" to induce him to confess. And then when they had tried this grewsome and suggestive means, the county detective acknowledged that Kolbos cried out "You can hang me but I'll never tell."

WRESTLING MATCH HERE ON MONDAY

For the first time in the history of the Monongahela valley, a championship wrestling match will be staged here when Bonecki, the Polish champion meets Paul Davis, the Canadian champion. Owing to the great interest manifested in the art of wrestling locally, it was decided to hold the match here and last week articles were signed for the match which will be held in the Rutherian hall at Second and Schoonmaker avenue. As a preliminary to the main event, a five round boxing match will be held and several local wrestlers will try their skil on the mat. A large crowd is expected from surrounding towns as Bonecki has quite a following in the valley.

WEAK AND TIRED WOMAN

Tells How Vinol Made Her Strong

Monessen women who are weak, run-down and suffer from the consequent effects of such a condition, will be interested in Mrs. Odell's letter. She says:

"I am a farmer's wife and was all run-down, weak, tired and suffered from indigestion, and sometimes it seemed as though I could not keep around and do my housework. I had taken many medicines without benefit. One day I saw Vinol advertized and made up my mind to try it. I have taken four bottles and have gained seven pounds in weight, am much stronger and feel many years younger than before." Sarah Odell, Lockport, N. Y.

The reason Vinol builds up weak, run-down women so quickly is because it contains a delicious combination of the three most successful tonics, peptonate of iron to enrich the blood, the strengthening-creating, bodl-building elements of fresh cods' livers without oil, and beef peptone.

We want to say to every weak, run-down woman in Monessen that we will return your money if Vinol fails to help you as it did Mrs. Odell.—Hirsch Drug Co., Monessen, Pa.

He is now retired and spends considerable of his time among his married daughters. One resides in West Newton and one in Belle Vernon.

The Real Turk.

An insight into the character of the modern Turk is afforded by Harry Charles Lukach in his book, "The City of the Dancing Perishes and Other Studies From the Near East." Speaking of the Turk as the author knows him, he says:

"For parental authority he entertains a deep regard. A grown up Turk who is lax enough to drink wine will usually desitate to do so in the presence of his father. Similar diffidence is even shown sometimes with regard to smoking. Near relationship does not engender what the Turks regard as unseemly familiarity. Turks address their elder brothers by the titles of Abla or Agha beyt their sisters as Abla, scarcely ever by name unless the difference in age is very slight. They obey seriously the injunctions of their faith as to charity, and the solidarity of Islam does not permit them to suffer coreligionists to starve. Furthermore, they do not blaspheme."
